

Saving an elephant from transience was a record-breaking challenge for anatomist Gunther von Hagens. "Samba," a female elephant, weighing 3.2 tons (as heavy as three small cars) and measuring 6 x 3.5 metres required techniques, resources, and efforts that matched her enormous size. The plastination of Samba took 64,000 working hours, 4 tons of silicone, and 40,000 litres of acetone.

A recognition of the wonder and traits of animals, – our co-habitants on this spinning blue globe – is critical if not for their preservation, for our own.

Die Anatomie

der Tiere

Each animal houses its own universe.

Gunther von Hagens' KÖRPERWELTEN der Tiere (BODY WORLDS of Animals) features 20 whole animal bodies and more than 100 detailed studies of organs and skeletal, muscular, and nervous systems. This anatomical menagerie allows visitors an encounter, up close and personal, with the natural world's most mysterious and revered species. Discover the universe within and learn what resides under the animal's skin!

Learn and explore.

The lessons of your biology textbook spring to life when you look at the inner structures of the brown bear, octopus, gorilla, shark, ostrich, and horse. The intriguing specimens on display reinforce the study of animal biology, physiology, zoology, and veterinary studies for visitors of all ages.

Moments of wonder and comprehension.

The exhibition allows a peek under the elephant's skin. Its trunk with a network of 40,000 muscles is a feat of design excellence, as well as virtuosity. And who would have known that a giraffe uses its 50 centimetre long bluish tongue like a hand?

From experience to awareness.

The exhibition KÖRPERWELTEN der Tiere addresses both young and old visitors and increases their appreciation for life, nature, and for the threatened biodiversity.
